THE ENGLISH TREATY WITH PERSIA. The following is the text of the treaty recently concluded between England and Persia at Paris:

Art. The high containing parties was believerents in prisoners made during the war by the two belligerents is all be released.

Art. His Majesty the Shah of Persia eugages, immediately after the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty, to publish a full amnesty, absolving all Persian subjects who may in any manner whatsoever have been compromised by their relations with the English forces during the war from all responsibility of their conduct in that respect, or that no person, no matter of what station, may be exposed to vexations, persecutions, or punishment on that account.

that account.

Art. 5. His Majesty the Shah of Persia agrees, moreover, to take immediate measures to withdraw from the territory, and from the city of Herat, and from every other part of Afighanistan, the Persian troops and authorities actually stationed there. This withdrawal must be completed within three months after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty. cations of the present treaty.

Art. 6. His Majesty the Shah of Persia consents to renounce all claims of sovereignty on the territory and on the city of Herat, and on the countries of Affghanistan, and engages never to demand any mark of obedience from the chiefs of Herat or from the countries of Affghanistan in the shape of tribute.

His Majesty, moreover, binds himself to abstain henceforth from all intervention in the internal affairs of Affghanistan. His Majesty promises to recognise the independence of Herat and of the whole of Affghanistan, and never to attempt anything against the independence of those States.

In cases of differences which might arise between the governments of Persia and the countries of Herat and of Affghanistan, the Persian government engages itself to

The English government, on its part, engages to employ it all times its influence with the States of Affghanistan to prevent any cause of umbrage being given by them, or by one of them, to the Persian government; and the English government, when appealed to by the Persian government, in case of misunderstandings, will exert every effort to bring such misunderstandings, will exert every effort to bring such misunderstandings, will exert every effort to bring such misunderstandings to an amicable, just, and, for Persia, honorable termination.

Art. 7. In case of any violation of the Persian frontier by any one of the above-mentioned States, the Persian government shall have the right; if full satisfaction is not given, to commence military operations to suppress and clastise the oppressors. But it is expressly understood and agreed that any military force of the Shah which may cross the frontier with such a view shall withdraw within the limits of its own frontier as soon as that object shall have been achieved, and that the exercise of the above-mentional right shall not serve as a pectent for permanent occupation by Persia or for annexation to the States of Persia of a town or of any portion of the said States.

Art 8. The Persian government promises to set at liberty without ranson, immediately after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, all prisoners made during the operations of the Persian troops in Affghanistan, and to liberate in like manner all Affghans detained either as hostages or as captives for political cances in any part of Persia, on the condition that the Affghans on their side shall liberate without ransom the Persian prisoners or captives in the power of the Affghans.

Commissioners will be appointed on the part of the two contracting powers to carry out the conditions of the present article.

Art. 10. Immediately after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, the British mission will return to Teleran, when the Persiau government consents to recive it, with the apologies and ceremonials indicated in the separate note signed to day by the plenipotentiaries of the high contracting powers.

Art. 11. The Persian government engages itself, within the term of three months after the return of the British raission to Teleran, to nominate a commissioner who, in concert with a commissioner appointed by the British government, will examine and decide upon the pecuniary ciaims of all British subjects against the Persian government, and will pay the sums adjudged either in one payment or in instalments within a given time, not exceeding

Among others, the following regulations for the exhibition of cattle, &c., may perhaps deserve special notice:

"Only such suimals will be admitted as are deemed worthy of exhibition by the committee; they must have been in the possession of their exhibitors from the lat of July, 1856, and be announced by a written statement containing the names, occupations, and residences of their owners, a full description of the animals, and the length of time they have been in their possession; also certificates from the local authorities, showing that there is no distemper prevailing in their respective neighborhoods. The society will bear the expenses of feeding the animals during at the time of their exhibition. The exhibitors themselves are requested to appear in the costumes of their respective places, provided with the necessary fixtures and utensils for the care and management of their animals. Any one making false statements concerning his animal, or concealing any fault of the same, will ever after be deprived of the privileges of exhibitions of this or any subordinate society. All cattle for which premiums shall have been awarded will be required to be marked so as to be recognised at any future exhibition."

The regulations required for the exhibition of agriculti-ral implements and machinery do not show any special ar-rangement differing from those practised in America.

The products of agriculture and rural economy are re-quired to be sent in quantities sufficient to judge of their qualities and values, and all products intended for exhibi-tion must be announced in a written application, contain-ing their names and origin, as well as their market value at Vicinua. In comparison with the products of the forest at Vienna. In connexion with the products of the forest, an accurate statement of the divisions of plantations, their cost and management, will be required.

Farm, forest, and vineyard premiums will also be awarded.

After being to so, but no enmity existing between them. After being together a short time in mixed conversation, with a few other persons present, Clarke asked Goodrick for a chew of to-baceo; whereupon Goodrick took him by the neck as if to choke him, and a scuille ensued, in which Goodrick threw Clarke upon a side bench. On getting up Clarke told Goodrick if he did that again he would strike him; whereupon Goodrick took hold of him again, and another scuttle ensued on the bench, in which it appears that Goodrick received a very black eye, and got his right ear severely bitten. On being parted, Clarke went over towards the other side of the room, and, turning about, commenced talking with one of the persons present—leaving Goodrick sitting on the bench. In a few minutes Goodrick rick rose up, advanced hurriedly towards Clarke, (who instinctively retreated backward,) and plunged his fish knife (a small butcher knife) deep into his abdomen, and then withdrawing it, sat down on a bench on the rear side of the room. Clarke tore open his clothes and said, "I am stabbed." He staggered to the front side of the room and lay down on a bench, and, without having said any thing more, was a corpse within fifteen minutes, having bled altogether internally. Meanwhile, the police were sent for, who took Goodrick into custody, he having sat all the Judge Neale, coroner, held an inquest on the body this morning, and a verdict was rendered in accordance with the above facts.

The examination of the prisoner took place this after noon before Esquire John Summers, and resulted in his commitment until the May term of the quarter sessions. The prisoner, although exhibiting signs of the very lowest associations, does not look like a naturally malicious man. His act was evidently the result of the mixed delirium of

ing:

"A friend assures us that one pearl as large as a small marble (not a piece of chalk) has been shown to Tiffany & Ellis, the well-known Broadway jewelers, who estimated its value at $1,000, and offered to advance $700 on it. It lacks the peculiar tint of the Eastern pearl; otherwise its value would be almost incredible. The man who own; it has already sold small pearls to the amount of $200. Sub-expeditions were made in North Florida. A couple of the adventurous fellows took a week's tramp to Okefenokee swamp, and procured a 'gopher.'

"They visited a planter, who, with his thousand slaves, was a devoted naturalist. On his plantation was a house containing five hundred birds—such as could be placed in proximity—and forty negroes were employed in tending them. Here also were some rattlesnakes of large size. A skeleton of one was 'i's feet long—thus obtained: the hunter saw a smooth, round hole, near a log, and, stopping to look in, the snake, already coiled, made a spring at his face, which he avoided only by a quick movement. He killed and 'dissected and anatomized it.' He experimented with another to see how long it would live without food or drink; at the end of nineteen months and eight days it died apparently in good health."
